Background Information

About us:

Community supported agriculture (CSA) is a radical approach to the production and supply of food that builds strong, close and mutually beneficial partnerships between communities and producers. CSA is defined as a partnership between farmers and consumers in which the responsibilities, risks and rewards of farming are shared.

The CSA Network UK is the only organisation dedicated to promoting community supported agriculture (CSA) across the UK.

We support and promote CSA farms to flourish across the country, working towards a fair, sustainable and resilient food system by:

- Providing a network to facilitate communication, co-operation, knowledge sharing and capacity building between UK CSAs
- Supporting new and existing CSAs with resources, training, events and mentoring

- Promoting and raising awareness and understanding of the CSA model
- Representing the interests of the UK CSA movement to policy makers
- Linking to the global CSA movement

Our vision is a CSA in every UK neighbourhood

Our history:

CSA is a common concept in many other countries including the USA (more than 12,000 CSAs) and France (more than 2,000 CSAs), but in the UK it has been slower to take off. There are currently around 130 UK CSA farms and the number is growing each year.

From 2007- 2012 the Soil Association ran a project to encourage the growth of CSAs in the UK. This work brought together CSA farmers who decided, when the Soil Association programme came to an end, that they needed an independent network. In 2013 the CSA Network UK was founded as an industrial and provident society (IPS). Our current chair is Ben Raskin, agroforestry lead at the Soil Association.
